February Program:

Jeremy Sisk has a wide variety of corporate, higher education and small business experiences. As president of Xperience4Higher Inc., he's responsible for local and national small businesses' long-term success. His company was founded to bring results-oriented marketing to small businesses across the country. Jeremy understands that the right combination of people, execution and experience leads to serious results. Everyone at Xperience4Higher is held accountable to high standards ensuring each customer's success. His staff enables small businesses to compete, and win, against their much larger competitors. Jeremy believes in his company, team and small business so much such that he guarantees each client's success personally and contractually.

Minutes from January 2017

Triangle Potters General Membership Meeting Minutes January 3 2017

President Elena Ceberio called the meeting to order.

A list was passed around for members who had contributed to Stone Soup to add their emails so that Urban Ministries could email them a thank you.

Fay Krapf was thanked for hosting the TPG Holiday Party at her home.

Corresponding Secretary told members to let her know if not receiving her emails or unable to find their name-tags.

Treasurer gave an estimate of guild balance. Exact amount was not available as account access on-line was not available.

Recording Secretary asked and received approval of the Nov. meeting minutes, as there was no business meeting in Dec.

Librarian announced that odds and ends from library were available to members to take.

Guild acknowledged Lauren Brockman for an award from city of Raleigh for a pot that was on display.

Upcoming Events:

Pullen will help studio card-holders photograph their pots on Thursday, Jan. 12 from 7-9:30 pm.

NCS new class schedule available.

There will be a retirement reception for George Thompson, director of the Craft Center at NCS. More information will follow in Newsletter.

The sale at the State Farmers Market is set for Sept. 9 2017 and will be similar to the one held in 2016.

The NC Potters conference in Asheboro will be March 3-5.
