Kelsey Schissel creates with specific intent and purpose, producing unique vessels that are as pleasing to look at as they are to use. She feels that working in small groupings yields time for more attention. Every piece is distinctive and different and can be adored for its uniqueness. Her forms are influenced by nature, similar to the sensual curve of a bird's wing or the seductive curve of a mountain. The undulating movement of life can be seen in the flowing progression of her pottery from foot to rim
